Need a site to help you store your professional output, as well as provide links to your publications? Health Sciences Research Commons (HSRC) is a digital repository maintained by Himmelfarb Library that allows you to store your scholarly works. HSRC collects, disseminates, and archives the scholarly output of SMHS, GWSPH, and SON faculty and students. It can house articles (pre-prints and post-prints), audio files, datasets, conference papers and proceedings, departmental publications, lectures, images, posters, presentations, technical reports, and more--find the full list here.

What are the benefits of archiving your scholarship in HSRC?

- Discoverability → Ensure that your works gain higher prominence in Google Scholar and other search engine search rankings.
- Accessibility → Provide immediate access to your research by depositing a pre-print or post-print draft of your article or a PDF of a technical report or white paper, allows scholars to access and cite your works even if they lack a subscription to a particular journal.
- Permanence → Works are assigned a persistent URL, which remains the same even after you leave GW. This URL can be easily added to your CV or shared via social media.
- Metrics → Find out which institutions are accessing your works from around the globe.
- Impact → Increase your reach and scholarly impact by giving all of your works a digital home!

HSRC contains 12,000+ papers and recently surpassed 300,000 downloads. Notable collections include:

- Faculty peer-reviewed publications, organized by department
- GW Research Days posters and abstracts
- Grey literature (congressional testimonies, white papers, issue briefs, etc.)
- Open access teaching tools and instructional material

Student capstone projects

- Historical collections and memorabilia of the George Washington University Medical Center

Not sure if you're permitted to archive a particular work? Questions about copyright? Himmelfarb can help! Contact Meaghan Heselden, Metadata and Scholarly Publishing Librarian, to submit your work or for assistance: corbettm@gwu.edu, or 202-994-8357

Tip of the Month

Be Aware of Predatory Publishing

Have you received an email encouraging you to publish in an open access journal? Before you agree to publish your study, learn about predatory publishing tactics and how disreputable publishers can cause harm to a researcher's career. Go to the Predatory Publishing guide to learn more.
