Would you like your own private library? Himmelfarb's BrowZine tool allows you to create a library of the journals that you want to track to keep abreast of new information in your field.

BrowZine's My Bookshelf allows you to identify the titles that are important to you, browse new issues as well as older issues, and access the full-text of selected titles. Access to the full-text articles is provided by Himmelfarb Library, but BrowZine manages the linking so you can maximize your reading time. For most Himmelfarb titles, Browzine delivers a PDF copy of each article.

In BrowZine, you can organize your library by Bookshelf and Bookcase so that you can easily track different areas of interest.

For each title, you'll be alerted when new articles are available and can easily link to the full-text. If you're using the BrowZine app (Apple, Google play, Amazon appstore), you can easily save and store PDFs to read offline.

It's easy to get started on BrowZine:

1. Access BrowZine (listed on Himmelfarb's Databases webpage).
2. Select My Bookshelf then click on Sign Up to create a free personal Browzine account.
3. Select your Library to get full-text articles and updated holdings: George Washington University - Himmelfarb Library.

To add titles to your BrowZine account, you can search by title or subject. For example, if you search for 'obstetrics,' you can choose to explore the Obstetrics and Gynecology subject area or select specific journals from the search results. Journals accessible via Himmelfarb are denoted with a blue icon and journals outside the collection are denoted by a grey icon.

In addition to using BrowZine directly, BrowZine's technology is also integrated on other platforms to get you to full-text as quickly as possible. You'll find the related LibKey technology behind Himmelfarb's 'Find It @ Himmelfarb' links in PubMed. These links default to immediate delivery of the PDF, if available, before offering other full-text and document delivery options; here's an example: <http://himmelfarb.gwu.edu/pmid/27297952>.

BrowZine's technology is also integrated into the Health Information @ Himmelfarb search tool. This search tool, featured on Himmelfarb's homepage, provides 'Download Now' and 'View Issue Contents' links for many items in Himmelfarb's collections. You can see an example of how those links display in this example.

If you have questions about Browzine, please contact Laura Abate (leabate@gwu.edu).
